I thought the beam replacement had already been done?

The main beam was replaced. That was phase one of a planned two phase project. This is the second and final phase of the main foundation rebuilding project.

After this is done, will there be other similar projects to follow?

Based on the findings of the engineers, this project is expected to be the final major work to the foundation for the foreseeable future.

Why is the cost $30,000?

The engineering to complete this is very costly. And every year we wait the price tag is likely to go higher. Acting now may also shelter the cost by taking advantage of bids when contractors are looking for projects.
